Q&A Response 4

1. Can you identify how many stations need keypad and display, how many are just extension mics, and how many need additional features?

“Full-featured” is considered to mean having more advanced features than just making a standard page. These features include, but aren’t limited to, password protection, screen and button customization, profile changes based on password and pre-recorded message activation.

“Standard” is considered to mean limited to live or recorded paging only, with some optional functions that depend on management software.

Respondents should include a price for all stations to be “full-featured” as an add-alternate in case the Airport decides to keep the same station type everywhere.

2. Should the cost of integration to the Infax systems for visual paging be included in the proposal or listed as an add/alternate?

The cost of integration for visual paging should be included in the proposal as a specific line item.
